PROTECT YOUR CLIENTS AGAINST POTENTIAL COVERAGE GAPS

Protecting your client's balance sheet with cost-effective insurance solutions should not be done at the cost of omitting key coverages. Environmental extensions offered in standard casualty cover generally do not cover the wide gamut of possible environmental losses, potentially exposing your client to crucial coverage gaps. Damage to the environment, human health, and even legal expenses are costly and complex problems your client should not face on an uninsured basis.

Exposed areas

Some companies bear higher environmental risks than others due to their specific industries. An example is a company with facilities that produce or store toxic substances like chemicals which, despite all security measures, might leak into the environment. In other areas such as the pharmaceutical or oil and gas industries, companies can be held liable for waste discharge violations, emission exceedance, or improper disposal practices. The same is true for industry segments such as commercial and residential real estate, where damage can arise from indoor air quality issues, contractor negligence, or even neighboring redevelopment activities.
