ESG PUBLICATIONS

“Measuring and Managing Environmental Exposure: A Sector Analysis” study is one of the first global data-driven reports that focuses on seven key natural capital risk factors with related dependency/impact. Natural capital risks can be mitigated by several types of risk management measures including technical measures, Enterprise Risk Management measures and strategic steering.

ESG Business Services undertook pioneering research on the relevance of ESG for industrial insurance. “The predictive power of ESG for insurance” research identified ESG parameters which can help to predict risk events before they occur. The study also establishes the argument for the integration of ESG into risk analysis.

In the ESG Risk Briefings series, our experts share their insights on the pressing ESG topics and explore the associated risks and opportunities. Explore the latest ESG Risk Briefings to learn more about the ESG issues that matter most for businesses and management.
